Thus, a developer can create the required number of subdevices when a module is installed or when new subdevices are added manually.